

S. KOREAN TROOPS ENTER PYONGYANG'S OUTSKIRTS AND AMERICAN SPEARHEADS REACH SOUTHERN APPROACHES; STIFFENING RESISTANCE OFFERED BY RED DEFENDERS

Battle for One of World's Oldest Cities Under Way

DIVISIONS CLOSE IN

Believe It Is Only Question of Time Before Capture

By Howard Handelman
Far Eastern Director, INS
TOKYO, Oct. 18 — (INS)—South Korean troops reportedly entered Pyongyang's eastern outskirts today and American spearheads reached its southern approaches against stiffening resistance by Red defenders of the North Korean capital.

The battle for possession of one of the world's oldest cities was believed already under way. Three United Nations divisions, led by tanks and supported by planes, closed in on the seat of the waning Communist power in Korea.

Radio Pyongyang went off the air abruptly at 5:15 Wednesday afternoon (3:15 A. M. EST) after a three-minute English language broadcast.

South Korean sources reported, without confirmation, that North Korean Premier Kim Il Sung and his cabinet had fled 3,200-year-old Pyongyang to seek haven in Communist China's Manchuria.

In a 5 P. M. (3 A. M. EST) front dispatch, International News Service War Correspondent Irving R. Levine said the ROK (Republic of Korea) First Division was reported unconfirmed to have stormed into Pyongyang's eastern outskirts late Wednesday morning.

The dispatch said the U. S. First Cavalry Division's famed Seventh Regiment, successor to the outfit wiped out in Custer's last stand, was "just south" of Pyongyang shortly before noon.

At that time, the ROK Eighth Division, driving across the North Korean peninsula from the eastern port of Wonsan, was reported less than 12 miles east-northeast of the ancient city founded 12 centuries before the Christian era as Korea's first capital.

Other allied columns were less than eleven miles from Pyongyang's west coast port of Chinnampo.

Up North Korea's east coast, South Korean troops overran the key industrial hub of Hamhung and its port of Hungnam and drove farther north to within 102 miles of the Manchurian Yalu river frontier.

As 75,000 United Nations troops swept steadily farther through North Korea in a whirlwind offensive to knock out the enemy's remaining forces, the war's climactic battle was developing at Pyongyang.

Speeding up from the southeast beyond captured Sangwon, the ROK First Division was reported less than five miles east of Pyongyang at dawn Wednesday.

A later report placed the division's vanguards in the built-up area on the east side of the wide Taedong river, just across from Pyongyang proper. There the Tae-

TRAFFIC LIGHT LIKELY AT ROAD INTERSECTION

Chamber of Commerce is So Advised by Bristol Police Committee

SITE OF RECENT CRASH

The adoption of a budget, election of one new director, acceptance of three new members, and formulation of plans for the relocation of the large Bristol Chamber of Commerce signboard just north of the Green Lane-Route 13 intersection, highlighted the meeting last evening of the Board of Directors of the Bristol Chamber of Commerce.

A total estimated outlay of $5000 for the fiscal year which began October 1, 1950, was provided for in the budget, with the largest item, $1000, being earmarked for the continuation of the Chamber's beautification program to the western entrance to the Borough.

W. B. McCluer, plant manager of the Rohm & Haas Company's Bristol plant, was elected by the Board to fill the vacancy created by the recent resignation of Warren P. Snyder, who withdrew due to matters of health.

The three new members of the Chamber are: Leon Kanter, Kanter's Department Store, 400 Mill street; Pat Mann and Joseph Swerk, both of the Atlantic Tea Packing Co., Inc., Canal street, Bristol.

Agreeing that the relocation of the large signboard at the north-east corner of Green Lane and Route 13 would make it more effective, and at the same time eliminate a possible traffic hazard, the Board adopted plans for relocation of the sign at a spot further to the east of the present location. Constructed with reflective lettering, the sign directs attention to the Bristol business district via Green Lane.

The Board received with pleasure a communication from Francis J. Kryven, secretary, Bristol Borough Police Committee, in which the Chamber of Commerce was advised that the Committee had discussed the traffic problem at the Green Lane-Farragut avenue intersection. The letter read in part: "... We had previously discussed this particular intersection and feel that we may be able to erect a traffic standard in the near future."

Other provisions in the new budget call for expenditures as follows: 1951 annual banquet, $900; advertising and printing, $750; 1951 Youth Week, $350; transportation and signs, $200; trophies, dues and office expenses, $200.

State Police Say . . . Sometimes boys and girls like to take shortcuts going to and from school. Sometimes they like to loiter on the long way. But the SMART thing is to have your parents show you the SAFEST route to avoid traffic dangers. And always cross streets carefully.

Morrisville School Board To Build An Elementary School Building

CAPITOL VIEW TRACT

MORRISVILLE, Oct. 18 — A $150,000 bond issue is being planned to pay for a new elementary school which will be built next to the Robert Morris athletic field, the Morrisville Board of Education announced at a meeting last night.

Piling has been drilled for the foundation of the new school, which will be on the Capitol View tract, and members of the board reported that work is proceeding rapidly.

Permission was granted to the high school senior class to visit Lake Success this month to watch the UN in action, and also to visit Doylestown in February to attend a court session.

Boys who are not in the Morrisville school system may join the system's midget baseball team, the board said, provided they live in the vicinity, take a physical examination, and take out insurance unless their parents sign a waiver.

Dr. Frank Fowler has accepted appointment as the schools' dentist, it was reported.

Some members of the board suggested that a speech teacher be hired jointly with the county to visit the schools, correcting cases of speech impediments.

The board agreed to allow the Businessmen's Association to hold a Halloween ball in the high school gym on Oct. 30.

It was announced that the installation of a heating plant in the Manor Park school is nearing completion.

ALLEGEDLY CHARGED $50 TO GET BONDSMAN

Phila. Constable Released In Bail to Await Further Hearing in Case

LOCAL MAN INVOLVED

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18 — A Philadelphia constable has been released in $1500 bail to await a hearing next Tuesday on charges of extorting $50 from a Bristol man arrested 16 months ago.

Constable Edward Singer, 47, of Wyoming avenue near D street, is accused of extorting the money from Andrew T. Biddlmeyer, of 336 Jackson street, Bristol, who was arrested on a charge of assault and battery in June, 1949. The charge against Biddlmeyer was later dropped.

Biddlmeyer reported that he was arrested in the northeast section of Philadelphia and brought before Magistrate Clarence Friedel. The magistrate ordered Biddlmeyer held in $600 bail pending action of the grand jury.

The Bristol man was unable to raise the bail and was being taken to Moyamensing Prison when Singer reportedly contacted him. The constable told Biddlmeyer that he could have a bondsman post the bail for $50. Biddlmeyer made out a check for that sum drawn on

RURAL CRIME IS UP

Pernial of the FBI's "Uniform Crime Reports" for the first half of 1950 invites some interesting comparison of statistics. In rural areas—outside incorporated places of less than 2,500 people—crime increased 7.4 per cent this year over last year. The increase in towns and cities reporting was less than two per cent.

Here is an eye-opener on one form of crime—burglary. "While burglaries rose 1.9 per cent in the cities, such crimes increased 14.9 per cent in the rural areas." No one has attempted to guess why the burglary trend is increasing so much faster in the country than in the city.

Could one factor be that law enforcement is not in step with the mushroom growth of suburbs?

One table in the pamphlet is headed "Urban Crime Rates," listing the number of crimes per 100,000 population in cities and towns of more than 2,500. The crime rate in urban communities is still far ahead of that in rural sections, but crime in the latter is striving valiantly to catch up.

But the FBI does not make a clear distinction between "urban" and "rural" areas. That is difficult to do nowadays when most new housing is outside the old incorporated towns and cities. It would be interesting to see crime statistics for whole counties and states.

AIDING INFLATION

In describing the goal of its present wage drive, the United Steel Workers Union has used adjectives that come close to being a contradiction in terms. It seeks what it calls "a very healthy and substantial" increase. But anyone can see that a too substantial pay rise just now would be most unhelpful for the nation, which includes the steel workers.

A too "substantial" pay rise would be one big enough to force up the price of steel. In the American economy, steel is a basic material. It is an essential part of countless products the consumer buys, including services as well as goods. When the price of steel rises, the effects are felt throughout industry and business.

Moreover, the example set in steel influences other industries.
If an inflationary wage pattern is forced on steel it will be forced on industry generally.

No gift of prophecy is required to fortell what will happen if there is a sizable wage increase in steel. The same chain reaction has occurred since the end of World War II—indeed, the present USW drive is in part the product of an earlier USW contract that pushed up the price of steel.
Even in the inexact science of economics, like causes lead to like effects.

That loud noise in Washington is not the sound of the government dropping the excess bureaucrats.

Some women would do better if they spent as much time watching their children as they do their calories.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.
(Copyright, 1950 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18 — Communists still have a key to White House security closets.

The latest tampering with top secret locks took place at the outbreak of the Korean war. Contents of a secret message, intended for the Kremlin, got into the hands of American Reds 24 hours before it was cabled to Moscow.

Security agencies have reached conclusions about the latest leak.
The White House keeps mum, as it did on two previous occasions when vital wartime information got into the hands of foreign nations via a White House blabbermouth.

This time it took a raid on Communist party headquarters in Pittsburgh, Pa., to prove that somewhere in the White House there is a Kremlin boy who peddles U. S. intelligence data. So far, if security officials know the individuals involved, they are not talking. But it's a dead certainty that someone on Mr. Truman's staff talked, and to the Communists.

When a Pittsburgh judge late in September ordered the Communist party headquarters in that city raided, two truckloads of documents were seized and hauled away for perusal by the FBI and the House Un-American Activities Committee.

In the pile was the document concerning the Korean war which proved the existence of the White House leak. Stamped as having been received in the Pittsburgh Communist party headquarters the morning of Monday, June 26th, it said that on Sunday night, June 25—the day the North Koreans attacked—the White House prepared a note to Moscow asking aid in stopping the aggression.

The note—top secret, of course—was not actually delivered to the Kremlin until late Tuesday night.
But the seized document shows that the Pittsburgh Communists knew by Monday noon of the existence of the document and knew its full contents as well. Presumably, party officials in this country informed the Kremlin immediately, by clandestine routes, that it was on the way.

In this case the security leak probably did not mean too much, other than revealing that there is one. However, if the Soviets had been using the Korean attack as the curtain raiser for an all out war, the Kremlin would have been able, by submarine and air attack, to wreck the U. S. emergency supply lines that were beginning to function in aid of South Korean and U. S. forces. The White House note to Moscow explained that the government had ordered its fleet and Air Force into action to aid the defenders.

The two previous occasions of serious White House security leaks were in war time. One involved, according to ex-Communist Elizabeth Bentley, transmission to a Communist espionage net by White House assistant Lauchlin Currie, of word that the U. S. had broken the highly prized Japanese code.
Currie denied having done so, but nobody ever denied that Russia knew we had cracked the Jap code.
In fact, the Russians admit it.

The second wartime case involved an American minister to a foreign nation, who still represents the U. S. abroad. At that time he served the White House as a special top secret courier. He was dispatched by then President Roosevelt late in April, 1945, to Chungking, China, with a secret note for Chiang Kai-Shek that had been written in the White House. The President's representative got as far as London when William "Wild Bill" Donovan, director of the office of strategic services, pulled him from the plane.

It seems that U. S. intelligence sources in Russia had intercepted a short wave message from the Soviet Embassy in Washington intended for the Kremlin. It contained the contents of the secret White House note to Chiang. It was sent to the Kremlin from the Red Embassy before the White House courier had ever left Washington.

What disturbed the security officials was that the White House courier, already suspected of having peculiar friends, had been followed when he left the President's side. He conferred on a street corner with a Soviet agent, who in turn was followed to the Russian Embassy in Washington.

Security agents had the whole story, all right, except an explanation from the President's courier.
This has never been forthcoming, but it has not harmed his promotions in the State Department. He now holds a $17,000 a year job as a U. S. Minister, again in a super-sensitive spot, handling secrets dispatched by the State Department.

All of this only caused state department officials to yawn. So does the information seized in the Pittsburgh raid that disclosed a security leak in their own department as well as in the Department of Defense, in addition to the White House case. One other notation in the Communist files told of a top secret American plan for counter-attacking the North Koreans in the event the Reds did strike in South Korea. Two copies of this document had been typed and placed in secret government files. One was in the Defense Department, one in the State Department. How and where the Communists got a copy is still a secret. But the fact that they had one is not.

All of which might interest Senate investigators when they return to business in November. They found no Reds in the State or other departments in a previous search, he said, at the time Senator Mc-Carthy was pointing them out with both hands. Maybe after a few more raids on a few more Red hideouts, the Tydings-Lucas-McMahon trio will stumble onto a couple of Kremlin characters. Of course they will have to open their eyes a lot wider than they apparently are now.

Many a big deal has been made possible through a small want ad.

S/Sgt. Chas. F. Kinsey, commander of the local recruiting station, stated that the young men of this area who desire to enlist in the service had better do so in the near future as the local draft board is now calling men in the 21 year age group. The recruiting office is located in the municipal building Pond and Mulberry streets, (phone Bristol 811.)

An open letter to draft age men includes this information:
"You are in the age group subject to being called for duty in the Armed Forces under the Selective Service Act of 1948. This letter will advise you of some of the benefits to be derived by enlisting in the Regular Army and Air Force over the man who is inducted."

If you are drafted—you will be assigned to one of the armed forces, mainly, in accordance with their needs at that time.

You will not be given a choice as to what you will do in the branch of the armed forces into which you are inducted since se-lectees are called to duty for the purpose of filling existing vacancies.

You will be called for a period of 21 months or longer. If you are separated prior to the completion of 30 months active service, you will incur an additional five year enlisted reserve corps obligation.

"Should you enlist you may enlist."

Management Club Holds First of Fall Meetings

dustrial club would like to form an industrial volleyball league. Alfred Lewis has consented to help form the league and would like to have several teams from the different industries. If anyone is interested please contact Mr. Lewis or myself.

An octet from the Bensalem High School Glee Club under the direction of Ralph Barclay rendered a few selections after which Don Edwards, also from Bensalem High School, entertained with vocal numbers, accompanying himself on the guitar.

The meeting was then turned over to Clyde Betts, chairman of entertainment.

Mr. Betts said: "Tonight we have a speaker who is well qualified to talk to us on his topic 'So You Think You Know People.' It has been Mr. Irving Kessler's job to know people for the last five years. He has many affiliations with different organizations doing human relations work. He is a member of the National Panel of Arbitrators of the American Arbitration Association, a vice-president of the Industrial Association of Philadelphia, Chairman of the Industrial Committee of the North Philadelphia Y. M. C. A., and a member of the Industrial Committee of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Kessler is the author of articles on various phases of industrial management for several organized trade journals."

Mr. Kessler, addressing the group, said: "I have spent a great deal of time working with human relations and find that in industry too many have the idea that human relations is the property of the personnel department. This is not a true fact, as it can no more be the responsibility of the personnel department than any other department. The real human relations is between the supervisor and the supervised."

"What I am talking about is something we all think we are experts at and most of us are not, as very few of us really know people. In industry most of us seem to think the personnel department is the one who knows people and deal in human relations, but all a personnel department is, is a necessary evil. Industries have become large and it is no longer possible for the owners to have first-hand contact with the employees, also the growth of unions has made the necessity for personnel departments."

"In any company you will find that if supervisors treat the supervised fairly and correctly the company is known as a good company, and if the other way around the company will be known as a bad one, thus the cornerstone of knowing people lays between the fellow on the bottom and the one who tells him what to do."

"Most of us think we are experts in human relations but most of us are wrong," Mr. Kessler stated. "Many think they are skilled in this field because they are dealing with employees every day. Many come in contact with others every day and still do not know people very well. The only way a human relations program can be started is to work on it. You must start with a genuine sincere desire to learn about others and how to get along with others which means changing yourself."

Mr. Kessler said: "There are four basic points about all persons, and we must understand them to really know people. The first is—Every person has the desire for recognition, we all have pride and want to have recognition in all our doings. Each is the center of his own world and thinks he is hot stuff. We are all heroes to ourselves. Very few people are interested in the other fellow. Try paying attention and listening to the other fellow and you have made a good start in human relations. The second point is the desire for security which is deep rooted in all of us. All are concerned about what we will do when we are unable to earn a living for ourselves. The desire for security is so great in all of us that it becomes an obsession. The third is the basic response to warmth, love and affection and we all have it up to the day we die. The fourth point is the desire for new experiences. We all like to do something new and different. This point works in the factory—everyone knows that an employee who does the same thing all the time soon becomes bored and would like a change. And that is where the supervisor comes in to see that he gets a change so that he will be a better worker."

"The question now is how do we become more skilled in human relations? The answer is that we must work at it. The more developed and more advances we make the more we come apart from the self center and get to think of the other fellow and to embrace others. More and more we will learn to love our fellow men if we try to see their four points as well as our own. As supervisors we must turn our interests out to others and learn the art of human relations."

In closing, Mr. Kessler stated: "Remember the cornerstone of any good human relations is the relations that exists between the supervisor and the supervised. The supervised can not do anything about it and the supervisor can only do something about it if he is willing to make changes in his self."

President Rigby thanked Mr. Kessler for coming and his fine talk. He said that he feels sure that everyone here has learned something from the talk. He then announced that the next dinner meeting would be held on the second Tuesday of November in the St. James Parish house, Bristol.

S. Korean Troops Enter Pyongyang's Outskirts ding dips south before bending sharply eastward along Pyongyang's southern edges.

The ROK First, commanded by 36-year-old Brig. Gen. Paik Sun Yup who is a native of Pyongyang, was engaged in a dramatic race to break into the Red capital before the U. S. First Cavalry Division reaches the city.

The First Cavalry's Seventh Regiment spearheaded a swift advance from the south which was reported to have passed Chungwa, less than nine miles below Pyongyang, early Wednesday.

The heart of Pyongyang came within easy shelling range of allied mobile artillery and within eyesight of the South Koreans just east of the city, the metropolitan area of which has some 700,000 residents.

But as the allied columns closed in for the kill, they ran into heavy opposition from Communist tanks, anti-tank guns, artillery, mortar and machine gun fire.

a Langhorne bank and gave it to Singer. He was then released.

According to the records of Magistrate Friedel, Biddlingmeyer had been permitted to sign his own bond.

Singer received a preliminary hearing yesterday before Magistrate Nathan Beitel in Central Station. His attorney, Louis Sherman, asked that the hearing be postponed to next Thursday. The motion was granted.

Biddlingmeyer was called to yesterday's hearing by a court order and, according to Philadelphia county detective James McColgan, produced the cancelled check.

Before the second day of the trial was resumed in the case of Matthew J. Fisher and Charles E. Forrest, Treviso Heights, who were being sued by Robert C. and Margaret G. Lackey, Langhorne Terrace, a settlement for $750 was reached in favor of Mr. and Mrs. Lackey. In the original suit, they were claiming $3570, growing out of a dispute over the building of a house by the two defendant in 1947-48. Judge Edward G. Biester, who authorized the settlement, dismissed the jury which was composed of the panel for the first week.
